For the Governorship. The Ice Embargo Lifted in the Bay-Small Fire in Petersburg.

NORFOLK, VA., Jan. 26.-Special.-A prominent Second district politician was in the city to-day. When asked if Eastern Virginia would be likely to have a candidate for Governor, he said he was certain that there would be no aspirant from this section. He thought that the majority of the people of Virginia, so far as he could learn, favored Colonel O'Ferrall, and at this time Colonel O'Ferrall is stronger than the field. He said that one or more county papers have a number of gentlemen, any one of whom would make a good Governor, but none of them of sufficient strength to have weight in convention. It is the general opin the convention. It is the contract that Eastern Virginia will present the name of Dr. Lawson for Lieutenant-Governor, and it is thought he can win. Dr. Lawson would fill the position with dignity and would strengthen the ticket , ith the farmers.

REPEAL RECOMMENDED.

The Committee's Report on the Federal Election Laws. WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 28 .-

The special committee of the House of Representatives, of which Ashabel Fitch is chairman, has concluded its report upon the supervision and administration of the Federal election laws in the Southern district of New York. The evidence taken by the committee relates entirely to the administration and supervision of the Federal election laws in New York city and county. The committee after one and county. The committee, after carefully studying the operations of the Federal election laws, expressed the opinion "that all of these laws have enopinion "that all of these laws have en-tirely falled to produce any good results in the direction of the purity of elections or the protection of the ballot box, and have been productive of such serious and dangerous results that they ought at once to be repealed," and the reasons given for such repeal, as stated, are be-cause they result in the non-conviction of offenders, and are, therefore, useless to prevent or punish crimes; are expensive to prevent or punish crimes; are expensive and are fruitful of constant and continu-ing frauds upon the Treasury.

Ing frauds upon the Treasury.

The committee devotes some space to a consideration of the above-mentioned points; refers to the framing of the laws under which the chief supervisor of elections acted, and makes the following tions acted, and makes the following deciaration in regard to that official:

"He holds his office by a tenure which makes him practically independent of any criticism or danger of removal. He not only holds this office of chief supervisor of elections, but he has also had himself appointed a United States commissioner, so that he can set as an examining magistrate. With the power of the Government behind him, and with the money of the Government to use, he has man-aged for years a detective bureau, by means of which he has sought to get proof of the crimes which he has claimed existed in the city of New York. When in the first capacity as a detective he has obtained such proof as he wishes to use, he then in his second capacity as a public prosecutor issued the warrants for the arrest of the alleged criminals. Sometimes he gave these warrants to the United States marshal to be executed as a constitution in a third capacity. cuted, and sometimes in a third capacity as a sheriff he seems to have made the arrests of accused parties through his own deputies. Then in his fourth capac-ity as a United States commissioner sit-ting as a magistrate he has heard his own charges against the prisoners, which he presented to himself as judge, by himself as prosecuting attorney, and has decided himself upon their guilt or innostead of constituting a system for the protection of the franchise in the hands of honest citizens, has been used, as is sworn by the evidence, to furnish the machinery for the corruption and for-cible robbery of the franchise, and they ought, if for that reason alone, be prompt ly repealed. The committee, therefore, present to the House a bill providing for the repeal of these laws, with a favorable recommendation for its passage."

THREE QUEER PASSENGERS. A Type of the Human Elements That America Tries to Assimilate.

An odd trio hurried through the Grand Central station the other day in feverish ineasiness lest they miss a train for which commuters knew there was the broad margin of a full minute, says the New York Sun. The woman stayed her long strides necessary to keep pace with her husband, in order that she might reach beneath her skirts and right the maladjustment of some invisible garment. Train hands and less-hurried passengers smiled at the performance, but the un-conscious foreigner resumed her stride oblivious of any impropriety. A tiny boy, who progressed by hop, skip and jump, trustfully grasped the paternal hand and was lifted aboard the train ahead of his mother. The three then found seats and the boy at once began staring out of the

But only the least observant person could have mistaken these people for Italians. The man was clad in his best. The gar-ments were manifestly town-made, but fur cap he wore look if it might have been the creation of his own hands, a trophy of the chase in the wilds whence he came. The woman wore showy dark-green gown trimmed with a showy dark-green gown trimmed with olive-green lace. She had small gold ornaments in her ears. Her figure was of indefinite shape, and if she wore corsets they were of the ill-fitting kind that adds the last touch of shabbiness to a forlorn gown. The boy was neatly ciad in knick-erbockers and Norfolk Jacket. Only his cap had a foreign air. It was a brown cloth affair, running to a sharp tasseled peak, which was turned over half way up and flattened at the side of the head. and flattened at the side of the head. Only one with considerable ethnographic knowledge would have guessed the na-tionality of mother and son. The former was pale, but not ill-featured, save that mouth and chin were thrust forward in ungraceful outline. The boy had his mother's pale complexion and straight nose, but in his smiling curiosity he look-ed rot unlike other children native to the soil. But the father was unmistakable. His small, stanting, dull brown eyes, shapeless nose, high cheek bone and ugly chin proclaimed the ancestral and ugly chin procedamed the ancestral Kalmuck, his cousinship with historic Tartars. He was an Eastern European of more remote Asiatic origin, from Russia or the borders of Hungary. As to the skipping boy in Norfolk jacket and knickerbockers, his smiling curiosity will make him master of American ways before he has attained his manhood, and the enormous digestive power of the re-public will doubtless assimilate him.

Comptroller Hepburn followed Mr. Foster, he told Baltimore merchants and manufacturers that the nation that avoids manufacturers that the nation that avoids debasing its currency possesses integrity, which the Comptroller held to be a prerequisite to the attainment of confidence abroad and prosperity at home. JUSTICE LAMAR'S SUCCESSOR.

President Harrison Will Unquestionably Nominate a Republican. WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.-President Harrison has, of necessity, been considering for the past day or two the matter of appointing a successor to Justice Lamar.
It has been the subject of numerous suggestions made by his political and official friends, but the published statements which attribute to him, in conversation with these friends, the announcement that he has determined to appoint a Republican from the South, are denied by those who are in close relations with him. Another statement imputing to him the remark that he would appoint a successor to Lamar for the reason that if he did not fill the vacancy "another secessionist" fill the vacancy "another secessionist" would be appointed, is said to have no

It may be stated that President Harrison has made no expressions of his intention regarding the appointment of a new justice. Even his most intimate friends do not expect any information of his purpose until it has been officially promulgated. They do expect that he will investigate the subject of the succession, as if the vacancy had occurred in errion, as if the vacancy had occurred in he middle of his term, instead of near th end. They further expect that when he has completed the investigation he will has completed the investigation by the send a nomination to the Senate for its action. President Harrison believes that his term extends to noon of March 4th, and that there is no warrant for an abdication or abandonment of the functions of the office by him before that time. An interoffice by him before that time. An inter-esting precedent in support of this view is quoted. Within a few weeks before the expiration of President Cleveland's first term, about February 15th, he ex-tended the Civil Service law over the em-ployes of the Railway Mail Service. While considering this subject he con-sulted with an official directly interested, who ventured to suggest that the issuing sho ventured to suggest that the issuing of such an order so near the end of his term would be warmly criticised. President Cleveland replied that the term of his office did not expire until March ith, and he knew of no reason why a right thing should not be done the last lalf day of the term as well as on the first half day. And the order was issued.

The alarm of fire which was sent in from Station No. 79, at 12:99 P. M. yesterday, was occasioned by the partial burning of the house No. 606 north Twenty-fourth street, occupied by Mr. John D. Tyler. The fire originated from the outside of the building, where workmen were trying to thaw a water-pipe. The damage was very trifling.

damage was very triffing.

Professor R. E. Gaines delivered the second of his series of lectures on "Determinants" yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the physics room of Richmond College. The interes, in these lectures is growing, as shown by the fact that there were a number of teachers of mathematics in attendance. The lectures will be continued on Thursday afternoons at the same hour for several weeks.

A SATURDAY MATINEE.

Mr. Joseph Jefferson Will Present "Rip Van Winkle" at the Academy.

Dear old Joe Jefferson has consented to play a matinee on Saturday. It's a considerable concession on his part, for considerable concession on his part, for he rarely presents "Rip Van Winkle" but once a day, even on Saturdays, though the latter day is known as a two performance day throughout the United States. But down in Mr. Jefferson's great big heart is a warm spot for Richmond, for in this city he began his histrionic life, and in the old Marshall were the scenes of his earliest triumphs. Then, to Mr. Jefferson says it is his last seatoo, Mr. Jefferson says it is his last sen-son on the road, and he wishes to give all of his old friends an opportunity of seeing him. With only the evening performance this could not be done, for at noon yesterday every seat in the Acad-emy, including all in the top gallery, had been sold for the Saturday evening per-

There are many who could not have attended Saturday evening who will avail themselves of the opportunity to see "Rip Van Winkle," and there is every formance. "Rip Van Winkle, and there is every indication that the hous; will be crowded. Mr. Jefferson presents his life-long triumph this year in a splendid manner, and on a scale of magnificence as regards scenic effects never before seen in Richmond. The cast is an admirable

PREPARING FOR INAUGURATION.

Public Spirited Washingtonians Are Getting Beady for March 4. The inauguration of President Cleveland in 1885 attracted to Washington by far the largest crowd ever gathered there, severely taxing the capacity of the city and still more that of the railroads. Fortunately the weather was unusually fine for the sea son, and as many organized compan brought their own tents every available space in the parks and elsewhere was utilized, but the greatest task was to get the multitude out of the city again, for they were several days in coming by detachments, but all wanted to leave at once. It was ac complished, however with extraordinary rapidity completely off the main lines of travel. Warned by the experience of that year congress and the citizens of the district have begun early this year and promise the country that everything shall be done in good time and order. Chairman Berret, of the inauguration general committee, has general charge of all arrangements, and his working force consists of an executive committee of twenty-one well known citizens, all with previous experience in this line.

The chairman of this committee is Jamas L. Norris, a leading patent attorney and long a Democratic leader in the district. He succeeded his father, the late John E. Norris, as president of the Jackson Democratic association, the second oldest Demo cratic organization in the country, and was one of the two delegates from the district to the late national convention at Chicago. He was chairman of the Rock Creek park commission to appraise the ground, is a director and vice president of the National bank of Washington and a director in the Franklin insurance com-

General H. V. Boynton is another member representing many interests. As cor-respondent for many years of the Cincinnati Gazette and as dean of the corps of Washington correspondents his reputation is worldwide. He was a member of the committee which had charge of the inaugural ceremonies in 1889 and is a steady and killful worker in anything he undertakes, Another journalist of eminence on the committee is Hon. Beriah Wilkins, of the Washington Post. He was once a Democratic congressman from Ohio and is a gentleman of great experience and tact. Still another is Theodore W. Noyes, the Washington Star, and a fourth is Frank A. Richardson, representative of the Baltimore Sun. A very valuable member is Mr. A. T. Britton, who was chairman of the inaugural committee in 1889 and had much to do with making it a success.

Washington has maintained its steady rate of improvement since Mr. Cleveland's first inauguration. It is now the chosen home of hundreds of wealthy men who have retired from business, and is alto-gether probably the pretriest city in the country. All that is needed for a splendid on is good weather, but who can promise that on March 4 and in latitude 39

HAMLET THE LOUISIANIA". A Saddle-Colored Coon Who Has a Hare-Lip.

"The funniest thing I ever saw was a performance of 'Hamlet' by colored amateurs at Galveston, Tex.," said a Southern dramatic manager to a New York Herald man. "They had rented their cos-Herald man. "They had rented their costumes of a local house that made a specialty of masked-ball outfits. 'Hamlet,' a saddle-colored coon with a harelip, was gotten up regardless in the toggery of a Moorish prince, while the 200-pound 'Horatio' was resplendent in the court dress of Louis XIV. 'Polonius' wore No. 13 shoes and the costume of a Spanish cavaller, while 'Ophelia,' a bright mulatto resid ages clash fights and seastly lace. maid, wore pink tights and scanty lace skirts. Oh, it was a get-up to daze the very gods. The boys in the gallery got to guying the 'Ghost,' and he came to the footlights and ordered them to 'Shet yer mout.' Then he retired up stage, tood the chalk-mark made for his guidance by the stage manager and resumed: 'Hamleck, as I remarked afore them 'ero ill-mannered, no-'count, trashy white kids as hain't got no raisin' put in ther gab, I am yer father's ghost. I is, shuah, Ham-leck. Yes, sah. As I remarked afore, I am thy father's sperrit.'
"He got the prompter at this point, heaved a sigh of reiter that sounded like the exhaust of a steam pump and started in with the evident intention of distinguishing himself. 'Yes, sah yes, sah; I is thy father's ghostes, doorned foh a certain time to walk de yearth'—but he stuck again. Before the prompter could pull him out a red-head little Mick, who reas horn to be harred got held of who was born to be hanged, got hold of a tom-cat. He swung it by the tail around his head a couple of times, then let go. With a scream that would make a ten-pound shell sound like the song of a bullet, that cat went hustling through the air and caught the ebony ghost square on the head. He was standing on a trap-door and in his efforts to escape the cat he disappeared with a craes take. the cat he disappeared with a crash, tak-ing 'Horatio' with him. 'Hamlet' cried 'Fire!' and while he was rushing back Fire!' and while he was rushing back and forth, wondering what to do, 'Polonius' came puffing, on L. U. E. with a fire extinguisher. The nozzle got away from him, and the stream caught the melanchoty Dane and tumbled him over the kerosene footlights through the base drum. I would give $10 to see that show again. It was the best comedy that was ever put on the boards. I would give that company $1,000 a night if it would play 'Hamlet' as it did that night and the gallery could be depended on to assist in the lery could be depended on to assist in the out act."

The Use of the Loving Cup.

Every prosperous woman's club has its loving cup, but how many of the guests who see it gracing the banquet, know its origin or the graceful ceremonial which should be observed in drinking from 1:2 asks the Jewelers' Circular. The loving cup should have two or three handles and a cover and is handed to the principal guest as the toasts begin. The guest takes it by the handles and atanding, turns to the person nearest who also stands, and both how. Then while the second guest removes the lid the first one drinks and with another how passes the cun to his neighbor, who replaces the lid and presents it it turn to the next guest, and so the ceremony is repeated

In the old days of chivalry and of treachery, as a man while drinking from the cup was practically defenseless, his companion was required to remove the cover with his sword hand that he might not take saventage of the other.

GREW OLD IN A DAY.

A Man Who Was Buried Alive for Nearly Three Hours.

"I'll wager the wine there is not a gentleman present who can guess within ten years of my age," said Calvin S. Freeman who sat talking with some fellow-travelirg men in the rotunda of the Southern, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. ss ran all the way from forty-eight to ty-five. "I am just thirty-four years sixty-five. "I am just thirty-four years old," said Mr. Freeman. "I was born in 1858. I grew old in a day. I have passed through the most terrible ordeal to which a mortal was ever subjected-I was buried alive and lay in the grave, with six feet of earth on top of me, for nearly three hours. That was at Edinburgh, Scotland, nearly nine years ago. I was born in that city. At the age of twenty-four I married a girl who had been my playmate in childhood.

"A year later I was taken sick, and after an illness of but two days, was pronounced dead, and preparations were made for my burial. I was as conscious as at this moment, but unable to speak or move a muscle. A great weight seemed to lie on my chest and eyelids. All that night, and until 10 o'clock next day 1 'ay with a cloth over my face, listening preparations for my interment. As hour I was placed in a coffin, the funeral services were read, and I was consigned to the grave. There was no stifling sensation, for I had ceased to breathe sation, for I had ceased to breathe, but the black loneliness of those hours haunt me day and night. I felt that I would come out of the trance state before death ensued, would slowly smother to death, and the thought added norror to my situation. I had read of graves being opened where people had been buried alive, and how they had torn their flesh with their nails and turned over in their coffins is a mad struggle for air. I wondered there was any way by which I could quickly destroy myself when nature asserted its sway. Every hour seemed to as days. It was on Tuesday when I was buried and I fancied I could hear the chimes of the church, which stood a few yards distant. I wondered who my neighbor distant. I wondered who my neighbor was on the right and who on the left and if they, too, were buried alive. I wondered if there really was such a thing as death or if I was doomed to lie conscious in that prison forever. Suddenly I felt a muscle twitch. 'It is coming now.' I thought. 'A moment more and I will be struggling for breath.' I gave a little gasp, and the air seemed freighted with lead. I tried to breath, but it was like dearlies fold. but it was like drawing fetid water into my lungs. I had resolved not to move a muscle, to die with my hands folded or my breast, so that if my body was ever taken up my friends would not suspec-the awful truth; but I could not lie still

"The struggle began, and I fought in my narrow prison house as a man only fights for life. Horrible as it was, I seemed to hear my wife's voice singing in my ears. It was a cry of agony. I tried to answer it, but could not. A succession of thunder peals shook my prison house. It was the heavy blows of axes breaking open the box which contained the coffin. A moment later I was lying on the churchyard sward in my wife's arms. After my interment she conceived the notion that I had been buried alive, and to quiet her fears the grave was opened. I went into the grave a young man, and came out aged, as you see me

A TYPROID FEVER THEORY.

It is Missmatic or Earth Born and Occurs Oftener on Gravel Than Clay Soil. Speaking of typhoid fever in Dublin,

Sir Charles Cameron has said he had come to the conclusion that there and perhaps eisewhere it was miasmatic or earth born. In Dublin during the last decade one person in 144 living on clay soils had typhoid fever and one in every ninety-two living on graveis. The disengagement of the micro-organisms of the disease took place when the soils became dry, and this occurred more frequently with gravei than with clay. When all the organic debris produced in towns was quickly removed and when the dangerous subterranean atmosphere was prevented from entering dwellings, or even vented from entering dwellings, or even streets; when sewage flowed steadily day and night through well constructed main sewers, and when soils were thoroughly drained and kept free from filth, then a substantial reduction in the mortality caused by typhoid fever, and indeed by other diseases, might be expected.
